The effects of recent events upon the peasants and ordinary working people also are quite apparent. Many of the every-day people of this country have been hitter enemies of Communism and its threat of collectivization of the land.

But they prefer Tito's brand of Communism to Moscow's, because Tito is a Yugoslav. They view the charges by the Cominform as foreign intervention. It is generally believed they will follow a man who is strong enough to lead them against this.

At the same time the U. S. Air Force attacked the growing fuel shortage in blockaded western Berlin, which in 19 days has cut factory operations 40 per cent. The first "flying coalman" winged into Berlin shortly after noon with 110 bags of coal. The Americans began the operation in the face of a veiled Russian warning on he safety of their air bridge planes. The Communist-d om i nate d Socialist Unity Party (S.E.D.) announced in the Soviet sector:

Tootsie Roll' Maker Dies in New York at 55

Rubin, 55, head of the candy company that makes "tootsic rolls," died yesterday.

A native of Manhattan's lower cast side, Rubin began his busi-ness career when he was eight years old by helping his father in a box factory.

Later Rubin became a partner in the firm of Joseph Rubin and Sons, which made millinery and candy boxes. He became a director of the Sweets Co. of America, makers of tootsle rolls, in 1935, when he bought 100 shares

A year later he had bought a controlling interest in the candy company and became its presi-dent. He changed the formula for rolls so they would be softer and have more hocolate flavor:

In 1938 he moved his factory In 1938 he moved his factory to Hoboken, N. J., for more space and a railroad siding. He designed a plant with a "gravity system" so that the candy dropped from floor to floor through different processes, until it reached packing cases on the ground floor.

PUBLIC OPINION POLLS

Effects of public opinion polls, and responsibilities of those who take them, were discussed at a recent session of the University of Chicago round table.

It is generally acknowledged that the opinions tabulated in polls often have a strong influence on national leaders who are dealing with the matters concerned. Further it is believed that the polls themselves actually influence public opinion, by swaying the minds of persons who want to be on the majority side of public questions. There was considerable discussion as to whether these effects are good or bad for a democratic system. Needless to say, no conclusion was reached.

The fact that polls have weight in determining the outcome of public questions imposes a heavy responsibility on those responsible for the polls. If the best interests of the people are to be served, polls must be taken with conscientious regard for accuracy and impartiality. Since they only sample opinion, rather than taking a full cross-section, both fairness and accuracy depend on a thorough knowledge of the technical theories of sampling.

Leaders in the poll-taking industry say they are aware of their responsibilities. It is to be hoped that they are, for the individual has little means, except his own common sense, to protect himself from being misled by the reported opinions of others.

In setting up a new currency in western Germany the Allied occupying powers are seeking to prevent runaway inflation. As a more immediate aim, a sound currency is wanted to facilitate operation of the European Recovery Program in Germany. Much of the success of the move will depend on the ability to develop enough productive wealth in Germany to back the new currency.

LOST ATLANTIS

If a modern explorer could pick the discovery he would like to make and thereby attain fame for all time, not a few would plump for the lost Atlantis. On a list recently made by newspaper men of the ten greatest possible stories, the discovery of Atlantis ranked high, and it had severe com-

Now a British scientific expedition is reported to be searching for it with radar. This will be a 25-man expedition, headed by Egerton Sykes, including trained oceanographers as well as radar specialists. They will start in the North Atlantic, near the legendary site of the lost continent.

Atlantis, the Greek philosopher Plato said on Egyptian authority, was a former continent in the Atlantic, apparently between Africa and America. It is supposed to have had a highly developed civilization, and to have engaged in a great war with Egypt and Athens. Eventually in some great catastrophe thousands of years ago it sank beneath the waves, and has never been seen since.

Ever since Plato, there have been attempts to locate Atlantis. Some thought it a twisted reference to America. A plausible guess is that the legend contains a distorted memory of the remarkable lost civilization of the Mediterranean island of Crete. In any event. its discovery would be without doubt the greatest event of the year.

THE WALLACE CAMPAIGN

The New Times, published in Moscow, tells us about the Henry Wallace campaign. It is good to get an American story from Moscow, particularly about Wallace. For instance, the New Times tells us why Wallace is running for the Presidency:

"Wallace declared that in deciding to run for the Presidency and in launching the organization of an independent party, he was seeking a way out for broad sections of the American people who were gripped with 'confusion, uncertainty, fear' in the face of the threatening economic crisis and who were alarmed by the reckless foreign policy of the American government."

Perhaps the editors of this weekly could also tell us the nature of the "threatening crisis." Nobody sees any crisis in this country at the present time or in the near future. If anything, things time or in the near future. It anything, things seem to be pretty good. We are running on somewhere about $40,000,000,000 government expenditure and we have not gone broke yet nor rationed food nor are vast numbers unemployed. Something must have gone wrong with the crisis that Wallace has been talking about since he took the Moscow line, and that was long before he decided to run for the Presidency—or was it?

This is how the Russians explain Wallace's difficulties:

The efforts of Wallace and his supporters to unite America's progressive forces into a new party are meeting with obstacles in the shape of certain peculiarities of American democracy. In a number of states, for example, the law is so shaped as to secure a monopoly of the two Wall Street parties—Republican and Democratic—and to make the Republican and Democratic—and to make the nomination of a progressive candidate virtually impossible. In other states, the registration of Wallace's candidacy will involve intricate formalities and heavy expenses. Again, Wallace's proposal for the creation of a new party is not approved by the leadership of American trade unions, including leaders of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, who feel that the nomination of a progressive candidate may lessen the chances for the re-election of Truman, whom they regard as a 'lesser evil' in comparison with such dyed-in-the-wool reaction aries as the probable Republican candidates—Taft and Dewey."

That is a long quotation but it does one's heart good. By the looks of it nobody wants Wallace except himself and his Moscow friends. Everybody is cept himself and his Moscow triends. Everybody is against the poor boy. The law is rigged against him; the labor unions won't have him. The Republicans and Democrats don't want him. "I don't want him; you can have him; he's too Guru for me"—or am I going Pegler?

Of course, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Clare Luce's candidate for vice president, is not for Wallace, but she has her difficulties some of which are very curious For instance. Mrs. Roosevelt some time

The truth is that the fellow who carries the gun is less dangerous than the fellow who poisons the mind. Certainly a voice shrieking, "Down with Capitalism!" is not as potent as the professor who corrupts our children by teaching them to disrespect American institutions and traditions. The gun-toter is a wild man whom the Communist wheelfth the light and a pulsance once they gain

I do not go for Henry Wallace nor for Clare Luce's Vice Presidential nominee because both seem to be confused about this essential problem, which is that Marxism is a reversion to human slavery to the State, which is bad no matter how beautiful the intellectual can paint the sweet by-and-by. The trouble is nobody knows when the sweet by-and-by will be—in 50 years, in a century or two or in remotely distant history. That Body of Yours

IRRITABLE COLON, UNSTABLE BOWEL Whenever we meet the four letters "itis" as the ending of a word we think of "inflammation of." Thus we have appendicitis, neuritis, arthritis-infiammation of the appendix, a nerve, and a joint. Because of this we think of "colitis" as an inimmation of the colon or large intestine. However, as the ordinary case of colitis—mucous or spastic—is not a real or true inflammation but only an irritation, physicians now are calling the condition

"fritable colon." Other names given it are "unstable colon." Other names given it are "unstable colon." And "spastic, irritable bowel."
In "Medical Clinics of North America," Dr. E. N.
Collins of Cleveland states that irritable colon is

Collins of Cle the most common cause and the most neglected condition causing distress or discomfort in the abdomon. Because of this over-present discomfort, various kinds of quieting drugs are used and many operations performed, "Of 1,000 cases of 'unstable colon' studied by Dr. S. M. Jordon several years ago, 73 per cent—3 of every 4—had a history of daily use of laxatives, enemas, or colonic irrigations; 38 per cent had no history of 'the nerves' being a cause." As we know, 'the nerves', or emotional disturbances are believed to be the cause of irritable colon in the majority of cases. But Dr. Collins states that, in trying to find the cause, the physician should study the case from three standpoints: (a) Change in the natural action or movement of the bowel caused by too many laxatives or enemas; (b) irritation by rough foods; and (c) effects upon the bowel of emotional disturbances. All three of these conditions cause irritation with an excess amount of water being formed, just as we have an excess of water formed in the nose, eye, stomach excess of water formed in the nose, eye, stomach or other organ by any irritation.

The treatment of this distressing, though not dangerous, ailment is three fold: Rest, diet and regular bowel habits. Thus the patient should: (a) Have rest before and after eating; (b) soft gruels for a few days, then vegetables and fruits; and (c) regular hours for meals and going to the toilet. Reassurance by the physician that these three simple methods of the treatment for the problem. ple methods of treatment finally will give relief from symptoms without use of laxatives, rough foods and enemas, brings results in most cases.

Today in Washington

There Are Certain Democrats Who Believe They Can Persuade Eisenhower to Run Despite His Declaration

General Elsenhower in the face of his unwillingness to run. The idea is to put his name into the balloting along with that of President Truman in the Eisenhower nomination is actually made, it means the elimination of Truman. If, then, Eisenhower formally tenders a letter declining to accept—something that can happen in a few hours—the convention can turn to other names. But it would be unlikely to turn back to Truman. The convention would then be wide open.

General Elsenhower.

There is always a possibility that President Truman might turn the tables on the opposition within the party ny offering a man to succeed himself. That man important the Secretary of State has said the could not be drafted for political office, he would not refuse a request proffered him by the President of the United States. The name of George Marshall is well advertised, too.

running for office in the movie play, "The State of the Union?"

Some Democrats are making a shambles of their nominating contest. They are using the Eisenhower name primarily to get rid of President Truman, who, for reasons of his own, stubbornly refuses to withdraw. Every day, however, that the recurrent drive for Eisenhower keeps going makes it evident that Truman is not considered by the Democrats themselves to be a good enough candidate to make the race.

"man is now being urged to accept a Democratic nomination to save a party and a group of officeholders who just simply don't want to give up their jobs on the federal payroll.

The spectacle is not an inspiring one. If the effort to get General Eisenhower to run had been built up around a particular issue of fundamental importance, such as the Republican tendency to revert to isolationism or the "straddle" plank on foreign policy adopted by the recent convention running for office in the movie play, "The State of the Union?"

it evident that Truman is not con-sidered by the Democrats them-selves to be a good enough candi-date to make the race.

The idea which the "left wing"
Democrats have nutured for some time is that, once General Eisen-hower is drafted and offered the nower is drafted and offered the nower is drafted and offered the nomination, it wouldn't matter so much if he declined because the convention might then he stampeded for Justice William O. Washington, July 7—Some Democratic leaders who want to draft General Eisenhower despite his explicit declaration that he "could not accept" believe they can persuade him to change his mind when confronted with an actual nomination.

There is, however, a deeper strategy than this in the effort to bring about the nomination of General Eisenhower in the face of his unwillingness to run. The idea man. The convention would then be wide open.

It has been suggested by a few wind up with Truman as its nomwags around here — maybe they are Republican wags—that if all the Democratic are interested in is a well-advertised name, without knowing particularly what his views happen to be on public questions, then why don't they select Bing Crosby? Or why not Spencer Tracy, who did a masterful job of running for office in the movie man is now being urged to accept

"straddle" plank on foreign policy adopted by the recent convention at Philadelphia, the whole situation would be on a higher plane today—and maybe General Eisenhower would have sensed a call to duty. Time to lock up, kiddies. Dawn's rosy-tipped fingers are tickling the Empire State Building, and the chairs are all up-ended on the tables. What's that? You want one for the road? Okay, it's on the house. And while you're knocking it off, Uncle Willie will spin a Broad-house. And while you're knocking it off, Uncle Willie will spin a Broad-way bedtime story about a babe, a bum and a busboy.

In one of my early song-and-suds parlors, a kid named Charlie used to work for me as a busboy. He wore thick glasses, and the help around the joint called him Four-eyes. As I got the story, Charlie had ruined his eyes reading a lot of books about knights and ladies fair, and his head was crammed full of romance, chivalry and such stuff.

If there had been a grail around my nightclub, children, chances are Charlie would have gone looking for it. As it was, he settled for a frail. She was named Toots LaRoche, and she tripped the light fantastic—and occasionally herself—in the chorus of my show.

Like many chorus girls in those days, Toots had a boy friend who was a member of the larceny-and-old-lice set. His name was Pinky Paaltz and he was one of the town's most persuasive needle-beer salesmen. Of course, with this toughle in the picture, the busboy had to be content to worship Toots from afar, or at least from the kitchen.

"At Shanghai, we asked you some blunt questions and you gave us frank answers. We believe you will be equally straightforward now.

"We are supposed to be trained observers. From what we have seen, we can report unequivocally that the American people want.

One evening when Charlie was cleaning up the table at which Toots and her unbarbasoled boy friend were sitting, he knocked the remains of a tuna fish salad into Pinky's lap. The gangster was about to go to work on him with an object which looked like a stuffed sock when Toots went backstage to undress for her act, the travellation of the weak passes, in true knightly fashion he kept hoping.

A strange, intense light came into Charlie's squinters. "If you don't like him," he said, "why don't you leave him?"

Toots upped her store-bought lashes. "Lissun, kiddo. Nobody leaves Pinky Paaltz—unless he does it feet first."

I guess, my tinies, a word to the chivalrous is sufficient. All that night the busboy never took his mypoic eyes off Toots. When the club closed he followed her and Pinky to the head in which she lived and closed, he followed her and Pinky to the hotel in which she lived and waited outside.

When the needle-beer salesman finally emerged, Charlie stepped up to him and said, "I want to talk to you, Mr. Paaltz."

The gangster grabbed for his gun, then saw who the speaker was and laughed. "If it ain't the tuna-fish king," he sneered. "Whatcha doin' out so late?"

"You'l find out," said Four-eyes, reaching into his inside pocket.
Well, my little ones, I guess you really couldn't blame Pinky for what happened. After all, how was he to know that the busboy was reaching for his glasses because his eyes were watering? And how was he to know that the shot from his revolver would be heard the 16th Precinct Station around the corner?

I read about it next afternoon and went to the hospital to see my busboy. By one of those miracles which only happen on Broadway, the bullet had bounced off the metal case in which he kept his glasses. Four-eyes was plenty shaken up, but the doctor told me he'd be out in a week. As for Pinky, the cops had nabbed him with the hot gun in his hand.

At the club that night I broke the news to Toots. "Your gentleman friend won't be bothering you any more," I told her. "The law picked him up for shooting a guy."

"That's swell," said the curvacious cupcake. "Who was the target?"

'Charlie, the busboy," I said, "and the argument was over you. He's in Polyclinic Hospital."

He's in Polyclinic Hospital."
"I-guess I ought to send him somethin'," said Toots. "Maybe a book. I would be very appreciated if you'd buy him one and take it out of my salary."

Which I did. But when Toots opened her pay envelope that Saturday, she almost hollered the joint down.

"Whatcha mean, twenty bucks fer a book?" she said, "What did it have, a mink cover?"

Bard Playhouse Comedy Is Hit as Season's 2nd Bill

With Lew Danis portraying a four star role of John Lawrence and backed up efficiently by an excellent supporting cast, Norman Krasna's three-act comedy, "John Loves 'Mary," was well received by an enthusiastic audience at the Bard College Playhouse, Annandale-on-Hudson Tuesday night.

Last night's performance was the second production of the summer season staged at the Playhouse, and was a benefit for the Northern Dutchess Hospital, The through Sunday. A special mat-inee will be given Saturday afternoon for the Fresh Air Fund.

Danis, a veteran of World War
2, carried admirably the role of

John's G. I. buddy, Fred Taylor, portrayed by Jared Reed, who also scored a marked hit with his easy going personality, meanwhile married another girl in the United States. This hectic incident left John with a barrier to his planned wedding with Mary, the girl who waited three years for her land of African bird, the Social Weaver, makes a communal nest of grass larger than an office desk. waited three years for her lover
